WRA 210 – Module 4

Module 4 Rationale

In module 4, I created my sitemap (after multiple variants of the same idea based on my comfort level) and my navigation page.

My sitemap includes the things that I can put in my website now to make it relevant and usable. I have also made notes on things to add in the future as my resume and portfolio grow.

For the navigation page, I uploaded the landing page, because that is where the navigation will begin. Rather than have a separate "about me" page, I have combined "home" and "about me", and made that the place from where navigation will begin. From there I have pages for my writing, photography, resume and contact information.

Several things played key roles in deciding how to proceed with my web page. Unlike many of my fellow students, I am in WRA210 in the first semester of my major, so I have very few pieces that I feel are portfolio ready. I have also been a stay-at-home mother for the last seven years, so my resume is limited and outdated as well. My site is quite literally starting from scratch as I have very little that I feel is worthy of contributing to it right now. I see this as a plus because I can concentrate on design elements and appearance – making sure that my site is visually pleasing, and add relevant content later.
